CRESST works with young people, and their communities developing schemes and learning opportunities that promote the key life-skills of communication, negotiation and empathy, skills that together give us the ability to manage conflict and disagreement creatively, calmly and constructively.

Established by Sheffield Quakers with funding from a sizeable legacy, CRESST has worked across the city since 2004. Now an independent UK charity, we hope to build on the successes of the last 3 years which include -

Working with over 25 schools

Over 1000 young people and 150 teachers enjoying our conflict resolution education programmes

Over 120 trained volunteer peer mediators across the city

“A wonderful addition to our school – Peer Mediators have had a very positive influence in school.”

You will also receive invitations to our planned events

We always need volunteers to work with us, could that be you?

Promoting the work we do, delivering in schools and communities, supporting our office functions and being part of our governing body, if you would like to help and have the skills and time to volunteer, please get in touch.

We work with children and young people to enable them to understand conflict and have the tools to deal effectively with it throughout their lives.

We do this through our conflict resolution education programmes. We also help set up and support peer mediation schemes in schools where the children and young people we work with can put the skills they learn into action.
